Tacto Rugs

'Campos channels a journey to Lisse in the Netherlands, known for its bright tulip fields'

Tacto is Spanish for 'sense of touch'. With Valencia-based Tacto Rugs, it is therefore clear from the beginning that texture will play a big role. Its newly launched first collection took more than three years to finalise, and features hand-loomed, hand-tufted and kilim (with additions of embroidery and pile) qualities. Tacto has been conceived as the design brand of Kuatro Carpets, a company with years of experience developing out of what was originally a family-owned carpet import business.

A design brand needs designers, in this case two studios: Yonoh and Enblanc. Yonoh, a multidisciplinary design studio founded by Clara del Portillo and Alex Selma in 2006, has designed the Caminos kilim, in which the flatwoven surface in 100% wool is adorned with embroidery. Enblanc, a studio run by Paula Aloy and José Aranda whose specialisms are industrial design, graphic communications and interior design, is responsible for a total of six designs. Inspiration appears to have come from a vast number of sources. Burbuja—'bubble' in Spanish—with its tactile circles in higher pile evokes the pleasures of playing with bubble wrap. Campos channels a journey to Lisse in the Netherlands, known for its bright tulip fields, a natural embodiment of pure colour. Gotas speaks to another sense, that of hearing. Its design is based in the sound of rain and movement of time. This is a collection conspiring to awaken our senses.
